

North Carolina Medical Society Leadership College

The North Carolina Medical Society Leadership College is a prestigious and intensive leadership development course designed to orient and train NCMS members for potential future leadership positions at the county, specialty, state and national levels. A select group of around twenty scholars is chosen to participate in this year long training course. The Leadership College combines the elements of mentoring, organizational education, skills training and guided experiences. The training also stresses the three core areas of leadership: the philosophy of leadership, the principles of leadership, and the practice of leadership. While the program concentrates on leadership at the state level, the skills and principles learned will certainly benefit all of organized medicine and the profession as a whole.

The Leadership College is a collaborative project of the North Carolina Medical Society and the NCMS Foundation. Our Leadership Endowment provides partial funding for the program; however we rely on generous support from NCMS members and loyal corporate partners.
